Harry A. Carey has been a Professor of Agricultural Extension Education at Penn State since 1985. As part of his duties, he:

- teaches communication methods and media
- teaches intensive writing for agricultural careers
- teaches international agricultural development
- conducts numerous credit courses for county extension staff
- conducts numerous communications/extension education presentations and workshops for extension staff and ag-related audiences.

Prior to joining the Penn State faculty he was an agricultural extension agent and extension communication specialist.

Mr. Carey has extensive international experience. He served two years on a Penn State/USAID project in Swaziland, and two years on a United Nations FAO project in Zimbabwe. He also has been involved with UN projects in Kenya, Pakistan, LeSotho, Lithuania, Albania, and South Africa.
